

BROWNALUMNI
ASSOCIATION

The Alumni College Advising Program (ACAP) is an independent college advising service for the children of Brown alumni.

What do we offer?

ACAP is an independent college advising service for the children of Brown alumni available during the academic year (September through June). This service, offered free of charge by the Brown Alumni Relations department, is aimed at helping families understand and navigate today's college admission landscape.

Our work with students might include any of the following:

- Setting the context: admission landscape overview
- Review of student's academic interests and record
- Review of tests and testing plan
- Review of extracurricular interests and activities
- Discussion of colleges/college list development
- Discussion of application process
- Post-decision follow up

Our program offers up to 3 hours of counseling time per student, which typically includes an initial meeting here on campus. If you are unable to make it to campus, we'd be happy to work with you over the phone or by e-mail. We begin meeting with students after January 1 of their junior year of high school. We are also available for quick phone or e-mail consultation prior to that time.

Please note, ACAP is not an advocacy program and students do not have to have an interest in Brown to work with us.
